INTRODUCTION by Professor S. F. C. Milsom

I. The Place of Pollock and Maitland Today, xxiii; II. The Real Actions, xxvii; III. The Personal Actions, xlix; IV. Procedure, lxiv; V. A General View, lxxi.

SELECT BIBLIOGRAPHY AND NOTES by Professor S. F. C. Milsom

I. (1) Original Sources: Ancient Laws and Law Books, lxxv; Records of Royal Courts to the late Thirteenth Century, lxvi; Records of Local Courts to the early Fourteenth Century, lxvii; Early Year Books, lxviii. (2) Institutional Studies: General Accounts, lxxix; Local and Private Courts and Officials, lx; Eyres, lxx; Benches and Judicial Aspects of Exchequer, lxxx; Profession and Literature, lxxxi; Criminal Administration and Law, lxxxii; Jury Proceedings, lxxxiii; Legislation, lxxiv; Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, lxxxvii.

II. (1) The Real Actions: General and Background Discussions, lxxxiv; Background to the Actions, lxxxv; Writ of Right, lxxxvi; Mort D’Ancestor, lxxxvi; Seisin and Novel Disseisin, lxxxvi; Writs of Entry, lxxxviii; Other Actions, lxxxviii. (2) The Personal Actions: General Accounts, lxxxviii; Personal Actions in Local Courts, lxxxix; Contract in Royal Courts, lxxxix; Trespass, xc. (3) Procedure: General Accounts, xc; Writ and Plaint, xci; Procedure and Pleading, xci.

INTRODUCTION

BOOK I.

SKETCH OF EARLY ENGLISH LEGAL HISTORY.

CHAPTER I.

CHAPTER II.

ANGLO-SAXON LAW, pp. 25–63.

CHAPTER III

NORMAN LAW, pp. 64–78.

CHAPTER IV.

ENGLAND UNDER THE NORMAN KINGS, pp. 79–110.

CHAPTER V.

ROMAN AND CANON LAW, pp. 111–135.

CHAPTER VI.

CHAPTER VII.

BOOK II
THE DOCTRINES OF ENGLISH LAW IN THE EARLY MIDDLE AGES.

CHAPTER I.
TENURE, pp. 229–406.

§ 1. Tenure in General, pp. 232–240.

§ 10. Aids, pp. 349–351.

Duty of aiding the lord, 349.

CHAPTER II.

§ 1. The Earls and Barons, pp. 408–411.

The baronage, 408. Privileges of the barons, 409.

Knighthood, 412.

§ 3. The Unfree, pp. 412–432.

Outlawry, 476. Condition of the outlaw, 477.

Excommunication, 478. Spiritual leprosy, 478. Excommunication and civil rights, 480.

§ 10. Lepers, Lunatics and Idiots, pp. 480–481.
The leper, 480. The idiot, 481. The lunatic, 481.

Legal position of women, 482. Women in private law, 482. Women in public law, 483. Married women, 485.

Is there a crown 1 511. Theories as to the king’s two bodies, 511. Personification of the kingship not necessary, 512. The king’s rights as intensified private rights, 512. The king and other lords, 513. The kingship as property, 513. The king’s rights can be exercised by him, 514. The king can do wrong but no action lies against him, 515. King’s land and crown land, 518. Slow growth of a law of ‘capacities,’ 518. No lay corporations sole, 520. Is the kingdom alienable? 521. The king can die, 521. The king can be under age, 522. Germs of & doctrine of ‘capacities,’ 523. Personification of the crown, 524. Retrospect, 526.

CHAPTER III.

§ 1. The County, pp. 532–556.

§ 3. The Vill and the Township, pp. 560–567.

§ 4. The Tithing, pp. 568–571.

§ 7. The Manor and the Township, pp. 605–634.

Inferior limit of burgality, 640. Representation in parliament, 641. The typical boroughs and their franchises, 642. Jurisdictional privileges, 643. Civil jurisdiction, 644. Criminal jurisdiction, rights in the boroughs, 646. Customary private law, 647. Emancipation of serfs, 648. Freedom from toll, 649. The \textit{forma burgi}, 650. What was farmed, 650. The farm of the vill and the soil of of the borough, 656. Elective officers, 656. Borough courts and councils, 657. By-laws and self-government, 660. Limits to legislative powers, 661. Enforcement of by-laws, 661. Rates and taxes, 662. The borough’s income, 663. Tolls, 664. The gild merchant 664. The formation of a gild, 664. The gild and the government of the borough, 665. Objects of the gild, 666. The gild and the burgesses, 667. The gild courts, 667. The borough as a franchise holder, 668.

Corporate character of the borough community, 669. Corporatemess not bestowed by the king, 669. Gild-like structure of the community, 670. Admission of burgesses, 671. The title to burgherhood, 671. The , subject’ in the borough charters, 672. Discussion of the charters, 673.
Charters for the borough, the county and the whole land, 674. Charters and laws 674. The burgesses as co-proprietors, 676. The community as bearer of rights, 676. Inheritance, succession and organization, 677. Criminal liability of the borough, 678. Civil liability, 679. The communities in litigation, 680. Debts owed to the community, 682. The common seal, 683. The borough’s property, 685. The borough’s property in its tolls, 685. The ideal will of the borough,

BOOK II.

CHAPTER IV.

OWNERSHIP AND POSSESSION, pp. 1–183.

\section{Rights in land, pp. 2–29.}

\section*{Seisin, pp. 29–80.}

\section*{Gifts upon condition, 25. The form of the gift and testamentary power, 26. Influence of the \textit{forma doni}, 27.}

Note on the conditional fee, 28.

\section*{Protection of possession, 40. Modern theories, 40. Possession and criminal law, 41.
Possession and the law of tort, 41. Possession as a bulwark of property, 42. Possession as a kind of right, 42. Contrast between various principles, 43. The various principles in English law, 44.
Disseisin as an offence, 44. Disseisin as a tort, 44. Possessory action against the third hand, 45. Proof of seisin and proof of ownership, 45. Seisin as a root of title, 46.

The hierarchy of actions and of seisins, 74, 75. Is the writ of right possessory 1 75. Relativity of ownership, 77. Ancient history of ownership and possession, 77. Seisin and estates,’ 78. Seisin and title, 80.

§ 3. Conveyance, pp. 80–106.

Modes or acquiring rights in land, 80. No title by occupation, 80. No acquisitive prescription, 81. Alluvion etc., 82. Escheat, forfeiture, reversion, 82.

The release, 90. The quit-claim, 91. The surrender, 92. The change of estate, 92. Gifts when the donor is not in occupation, 93. Attornment, 93. Feoffments with remainders, 94. Charters of feoffment, 94.

CHAPTER V.

CONTRACT, pp. 184–239.

Note on the early history of the use, 233.

CHAPTER VI.

permanent legal unit, 243. The kindred as a local group, 243. Land-owning groups, 244. The kindred as a corporation, 244.

Transition to later law, 260.

§ 3. The Last Will, pp. 314–356.

Norman law, 323. The will under the Norman kings, 323. Post obit gifts of chattels, 324. Evolution of definite law, 325.

CHAPTER VII
FAMILY LAW, pp. 364–447.

CHAPTER VIII.

CRIME AND TORT, pp. 448–557.

§ 3. The Trespasses, pp. 511–513.

553. Sorcery in the text-books, 554. Cases of sorcery, 555. Sorcery in later times, 556. Unnatural crime, 557. Inefficiency of the criminal law, 557.

CHAPTER IX.
PROCEDURE, pp. 558–673.

Our formulary system, 558. An English peculiarity, 558. Growth of the forms, 559. The formulary system not of Roman origin, 559. Roman and English formulas, 560. Life of the forms, 561. Choice between the forms, 561. Little law for actions in general, 562. Modern and medieval procedure, 562. Formalism and liberty, 563. The golden age of the forms, 564. Number of the Affinities between the forms, 569. Attempts to apply the Roman classification, 570. Roman and English lines, 571. Civil and criminal procedure, 572.

§ 2. Self-help, pp. 574–578.
and seisin, 578.

Process, 578. Summary justice, 578. The hand-having thief, 579. Summary justice in the king’s court, 579. Summary justice and outlawry, 580. Outlawry as process, 580. Arrest, 582.
The king’s court and arrest, 586. Royal control over justice, 587. The writ de odio et atia, 587.
Origin of the writ, 587. Effect of the writ, 588. Later history of the writ, 588. Mainprise and bail, Process in real actions, 592. Process in personal actions, 593. Outlawry as civil process, 593. No

Ancient modes of proof, 598. The ordeal, 598. Proof by battle, 600. Proof by oath, 600. Oaths Number of the suitors, 607. The defence, 607. Thwert-ut-nay, 608. Examination of the plaintiff’s suit, 609. The defendant’s offer of proof, 610. Special pleading, 611. The exception, 611.
Exceptions in assizes, 612. Spread of the exception, 614. Laxity of pleading, 615. The exception Exception and denial, 618. The jury and the general issue, 619.
Composition of the jury, 621. The jurors as witnesses, 622. Arbitral element in the jury, 623.
Popularity of the jury, 631. Fate of the older proofs, 632. Trial by battle, 632. Wager of law, 634.
The decisory oath, 636. Trial by witnesses, 637. Other trials, 639. Questions of law, 640. Victory of the jury, 641.
The presenting jury, 641. Fama publica, 642. Composition of the jury, 642. The coroner’s inquest, 643. Presentments and ordeal, 644. Practice of the eyes, 644. Indictments for felony, 647. The second jury, 648. Refusal of trial, 650. Peine forte et dure, 651. Presentments of minor Miscellaneous points, 661. The king in litigation, 661. Criminal informations, 662. Voucher Function of the judges, 670. Oonlfid6ranta of judgments, 671. Last words, 672.