

Dear 1Ls:

The Society for Law and Global Policy is an organization devoted to increasing the role played by international law in the foreign policies of states around the world. By hosting forums on timely topics in world affairs, SLGP seeks to educate the student body and public at large about the role international legal channels could play in resolving conflicts or solving societal problems of an international nature. For instance, last year we hosted an academic forum on the North Korean nuclear crisis with speakers from several different disciplines and areas of expertise. As it is a young organization, there is also a lot of room for incoming members to find new ways for SLGP to achieve its goals. If you are interested in attending or aiding in the preparation for our events, please drop by our table at orientation in the fall and speak to a board member. If you have any questions before then, feel free to contact me at jbond@law.harvard.edu.

See you in the fall,

Tanner Bond
President, Society for Law and Global Policy
